Campaign and Politics at State College

Politics Stirring in Camps of Democrats, Socialists, Prohis. and Republicans

W. S. C. POLITICS

Rival Party Organizations at State College Among Students.

The hum and furore of argumentation is heard on every part of the college campus nowadays, and political parties with sensational planks incorporated in their platform are popping up like toad stools on a June day morning. That there are many astute students of the political and economic problems of the day at W. S. C. is made evident by campaign banners unscrupulously posted on college buildings, in the hallways, and everywhere, in fact, where they may be seen and read by the American voter, who at election time, is the most reverently honored person on earth.

First Law Breakers.

The Taft Club No. 1 was the first to break the laws of the Washington State College by posting a huge sign above the front entrance of the Administration Building.

In huge, black letters, on a back ground of shining white was printed the advice: "Join the Taft Club; be up to date; get wise; THINK!!!!"

This poster was permitted to remain in view of the passing public for one day; then George Grimes, the college janitor and the final victim of the majority of college pranks at W.S.C. borrowed a sky-reaching ladder from the fire department, and the Taft Club No. 1 sign was hauled to earth.

Democrats Organize.

Following this outburst of enthusiasm came a tremendous rally of organization by the Democrats. Democratic leaders of the student body made eloquent speeches in behalf of the Nebraska candidate for the presidency. Incorporating a plank in behalf of woman's suffrage in the Democratic platform, they solicited the votes of the young women of the college, as earnestly and persistently as did candidates on the state ticket in Washington flirt with the labor vote during the recent campaign for nomination under the direct primary law.

The Active Socialists.

But in point of real, fiery politics the Socialists have the day. Their bunch at W.S.C. is small, but already they have shown the ability to talk the principles of socialism until the lights are out, and the campus is still.

Temperance Organization.

Compact organization is reported from the camp of the Prohibitionists. They have challenged to forensic fray the democrats, republicans, and socialists, either singly or combined; and will discuss any phase of the great problem of "wet and dry" at a moments notice.

Debates Will be Arranged.

Wednesday afternoon representatives of the different clubs met and discussed the matter of arranging a series of debates, which would be so arranged as to determine a championship team. It is entirely probable that such a series of debates will be arranged.

Bring Out-of-Town Speakers.

Another plan under discussion is for other clubs to bring to Pullman two very prominent out of town speakers of opposing politics, and to have these speakers meet and discuss their respective issues before a mass meeting of all the clubs.

A reception was held in Stevens Hall Saturday night for the visiting football team.

SCORE, 33 TO 0

Spokane Y. M. C. A. Proves Easy Meat for College Eleven.

On a damp, slippery field the Washington State College won the second game of the season Saturday afternoon by defeating the Spokane Y. M. C. A. by a score of 33 to 0.

A glance at the backfield which entered the game for the state college caused a ray of hope to glimmer for a time over the gridiron. There was Ralph Rader at fullback, with Cecil Cave and Ned Cheely on either side of him and Jack Foran directly in front. A backfield which would be a credit to any college in the northwest. Foran played a beautiful game at quarter but Riney didn't care to work him too hard early in the season so he was replaced by Holt Boone in the second half.

Of course, the Y. M. C. A. eleven was plainly outclassed and the score would have been even larger on a dry field. Cave's work at right half fairly scintillated throughout the game, his 60 yard run for a touchdown on a kickoff being especially brilliant. Cheely, Rader, and the two ends, Bryan and Galbraith, also tore things up generally, and played havoc.

Dicky a Winner.

There was one man on the visiting team, however, who received a big share of the admiration from the crowd. That was little Harvey Dickey, captain and quarterback. Dickey was in

GOVERNOR MEAD COMING TO PULLMAN

¶ On the 28th inst. Governor A. E. Mead will be a visitor at the College. Complete Arrangements have not yet been made for his reception at the College, but it is known that he will deliver an address while here, the dominant theme of which will be affairs relative to the College.

¶ A royal reception for Governor Mead is being planned by the political clubs of the College, and judging from preparations now in progress, the day will be made memorable by the demonstrations which will be made.
